SMOKERS AT UNION LAST NIGHT, MANY

Arts Adherents Had Enjoyable Evening.

100 WERE PRESENT.

Programme Was Fine One—Dean Moyse Addressed Men.

The Arts Undergraduate Society held their first smoker of the year last night in the lounge room of the Union. Much enthusiasm was shown by the Arts men last evening. The committee in charge had an excellent programme provided and the men certainly showed their appreciation of the former's efforts. The staff was represented by Dean Moyse, Professor Hemmion being unavoidably absent.

Shortly after 8.00, President Smart called for order and after a few introductory remarks announced the first number on the programme. This was a selection by the Mandolin Club which was heartily appreciated, as were all the selections which they rendered during the course of the evening.

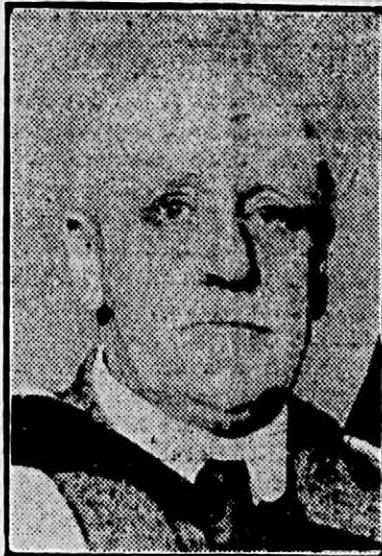

Other musical selections were rendered by Messrs. Dalton, Duncan and MacSween. Recitations were given by M. P. Caron, Kellnor and Morrison, the latter being exceptionally popular.

The most exciting item of the programme was the wrestling bout between Jones, Arts '22, and Dentistry '20. Both men showed good form and being well matched the contest was most interesting. Neither man secured a "fall" so the bout ended in a draw.

The Chairman then called upon Dean Moyse for a few words. The Dean spoke of the excellent musical talent which had been displayed during the course of the evening, with special reference to the Mandolin Club. He hoped to see many more such informal gatherings which were so conducive to college spirit. Dean Moyse then referred to one of our distinguished graduates, Percy Corbett, who has just left for Oxford as Rhodes.

Returned Men "Back" Their Enthusiasm for the Red Triangle.

We are not in a position to publish anything in the way of a complete report of the proceeds of the Y.M.C.A. campaign. Science has as yet made no report whatever while only the first two years of Dentistry have made returns. However, in order that some idea may be obtained regarding the progress of the campaign we are taking the liberty of printing the fragmentary report which is at hand.

Yesterday was the second day of the canvass and at the time of going to press the total amount reported was $276. The various faculties made returns as follows:

Medicine	$154.00
Arts	93.00
Law	15.00
Dentistry	14.00

Total $276.00

As we have said these figures do not in any actual way represent what has been contributed to date. It is indeed fortunate that they do not since to-day will be the last day of the drive and with their objective ($1,000.00) still a long ways off the canvassers will be obliged to speed matters up.

SCI. SOPHS ENTERTAINED BY FRESHMEN

Dr. Sullivan Answered Toast to Ladies.

125 PRESENT.

Dr. Shaw Responds to Toasts to King and Alma Mater.

The Science Freshmen entertained the Sophomores last night at a dinner in the Rose Room of the Windsor Hotel. The evening was successful from beginning to end—the eats were good, as was the music, and a general good feeling exhibited between the Sophs and the Freshies. There were in all about 40 Sophomores, and 80 Freshmen present. President Fisk, of Science '22, occupied the chair, and in a few well chosen remarks welcomed the guests. The guests of the evening were Dr. A. M. Shaw, Mr. Lawrence Lafolley and Dr. C. T. Sullivan.

After the excellent dinner provided was put away by the many students present, Fisk proposed toasts to the King and Alma Mater. Dr. Shaw in responding to this latter toast spoke of his long connection with McGill, having been a graduate in Science and Arts, and now a professor in Applied Science. The speaker then expressed his satisfaction that dormitories were to be established at McGill. Something like those in vogue at Cambridge, England, with which University he was connected for some time. A few interesting stories of practical jokes played on professors by Cambridge students greatly amused the audience. Dr. Shaw expressed his opinion that residential colleges promoted good fellowship, and incidents humorous or otherwise that passed during this time gave fellows things to look back on and say "those were the days."

Perhaps the most popular toast of the evening was that to the "Boys Overseas." This toast was responded to by Mr. Lawrence Lafolley, a returned Science graduate and now connected with the Faculty of Applied Science. Lieut. Lafolley was a mem-

Two Debating Societies to Meet First Week After Vacation.

An event which will no doubt prove of great interest to the students as a whole is the coming debate between the students of the Royal Victoria College and the Literary and Debating Society, which is composed solely of men students.

The committee are arranging a very interesting programme for the evening, which will be more or less of a social nature.

The Delta Sigma Society of the R.V.C. have accepted the challenge to a debate issued by the Literary and Debating Society. It was originally intended to hold the event before the holidays, but it has been found advisable to fix the date for the first week after the College reopens. It is proposed that the debate will be followed by refreshments and a short informal dance.

The Canadian Club executive is considering the proposal to combine with the Westmount Canadian Club in an endeavour to have several influential American speakers address the students.

THE UNION STAFF.

The success which has characterized the social and other activities in connection with the Union is in great measure due to the efforts of the attendants in charge. The building is looked after by Chapman, ably seconded by Mrs. Chapman, and through their good efforts much saving has been effected in the management of the Union. The Hall porter, Culyer, assisted by Bob and Tom, has helped assisted by Bob and Tom, have helped to make the Union popular, and all deserve the appreciation of the student body.

ATHLETIC ASS'N. MADE DECISION

McGill Will Not Join Proposed New Hockey League.

The Athletic Association recently held a meeting, presided over by President Arthur Walsh, and attended by representatives from the various athletic associations. Those attending were: Ross Laing, president of the Students' Council; Dudley Ross, V. Heney, Lorne Montgomery, H. Young, H. Mouquin and L. Greene.

It was decided that McGill would not join a new hockey league, but would remain with the City League and devote their hockey efforts to playing the schedule of that league.

At a meeting of the City Hockey League, held recently, it was proposed that the two existing leagues, namely the City and the Montreal should be disbanded and one new association formed. The McGill representatives, Ross Laing and V. Heney, stated they could not give their answer until the University Athletic Association had been consulted. The meeting held several days ago made a definite decision as regards this matter.

THE HOCKEY SITUATION.

The hockey situation at the College just now is no doubt occupying a prominent place in the minds of all devotees of sport, or, at any rate, it should. There has been a good deal of somewhat futile discussion on the part of promoters of amateur hockey in this city on the possibility of disbanding the City and Montreal leagues and evolving from the teams formerly composing them a new body. This proposal has been renewed several times, and with the determined stand taken by the Athletic Association in the matter, the situation has come to a head. While the other four teams of the City League have expressed themselves as favouring the new plan, McGill and M.A.A.A. have come out clearly as opposing it.

It is but right that the Student body should have some idea of the reasons which have prompted the Athletic Association in making its decision, in order that possible misunderstanding may be averted. When the facts of the case are laid before them we are sure that the Undergraduates will be ready to accord their hearty support to the policy adopted.

In dealing with the matter of competitive sports at McGill, and particularly with that of hockey, it must be kept in mind that during the last four years conditions have been far from normal. In pre-war times, this College entered a team in the Intercollegiate League, and it is fully expected that with the resumption of activity to be anticipated next year there will once more be a team wearing the red and white as our representation there. The Intercollegiate League is under the jurisdiction of the A. A. U., the governing body of amateur athletics in Canada, and a strict standard is maintained in it, as is only right and proper.

Now the attitude of the Athletic Association is that it would be exceedingly unwise, in view of the fact that McGill expects to operate in the Intercollegiate League next year, for the University to enter a team in competition with teams whose exact standing with regard to the A. A. U. is unknown, even although the offer made to induce such action may be tempting. We must never lose sight of the fact that McGill is a College, first and foremost, and that for us to prejudice our standing with the other Universities simply in order to keep the team from idleness would be the height of folly.

It is to be hoped that the firm stand taken by McGill and M. A. A. will be productive of good results and that McGill will be able as in past years to operate her franchise in the City League. But even should a clash prove unavoidable and the Red and White team should be forced to remain inactive, we may feel quite confident that the best course has been chosen.

WATER POLO TO-NIGHT.

There is a general disposition to revive pre-war athletics and to this end every effort is being made. This spirit is certainly commendable providing that in fostering it we do not err in allowing those few forms of athletic activity, which have been kept alive during the past four years, to suffer.

The Water Polo Club has eked out a more or less trying existence during these war years, and yet it has held together admirably in the face of repeated discouragement. The University Water Polo Team receives possibly less Student support than any other branch of athletics at McGill. In spite of this fact and of the almost invariable lack of available material the team has held together and is still in the league although facing very considerable odds.

To-night our McGill Water Polo Team will meet Montreal Swimming Club at the Laurentian Bath. The Red and White aggregation shows marked improvement over the form displayed earlier in the season and can be counted upon to render a good account of itself.

Water polo is an interesting game and it is indeed surprising that it does not attract a greater number of enthusiasts. We certainly owe our team greater support than we have been according to, and now is the time to make up for the mistakes of the past.

CORRESPONDENCE

The Daily is not responsible for the sentiments of letters published in the correspondence columns. Signed communications from graduates, undergraduates and members of the faculties will be placed in print if they are not of too great length.

Correspondents are requested to observe the unwritten law of the newspaper office — that they write upon ONE side of the paper ONLY.

No communications will be admitted in this column without the name of the writer being attached, not necessarily for PUBLICATION.

The President of McGill Daily:

Dear Sir,—The letters published in the last few days in reference to my letter about one of your editorials have proved so interesting to me and some of the student body that I take once more the liberty of using some of your valuable space.

The first letter written under the pen-name "In Vino Veritas" was certainly one of the most remarkable seen in your columns for some time. The unfortunate part of this valuable epistle was that evidently the writer thereof did not possess enough spirit to emanate the truth as the name would possibly suggest. There was certainly no argument or discussion on the subject in question in the letter but "In Vino Veritas" seemed to have a little personal grudge against my criticism and found delight in working it off his breast from ambush. I am sorry that "In Vino Veritas" did not have the moral courage to sign his or her real name, after a letter so full of slanders and trivial calumny. The writer mentions cudgels, but probably axes at close range would be more appropriate.

Fortunately the student body has not taken "In Vino Veritas" seriously but has rather bestowed its pity on so low a form of argument and questionable bravery.

As regards to the letter written by "Klondike," it seems very effective in trying to smooth over matters and not get in trouble with either myself or "In Vino Veritas." In fact, I rather think "Klondike" has championed my cause, and I extend my thanks to her. The name "Klondike" was not suggestive of "Peace at any price" and probably a more direct attack on either side might have been more appreciated by the readers of your valuable paper. "Klondike" makes one mistake in not perceiving that pessimism can be classified as an excess of worry. A little more excess on the part of "In Vino Veritas" would certainly have improved the first response and made "In Vino" popular to say the least.

Finally, I wish to remind any future correspondents that a little argument or discussion about some of the points brought up either in my letter or in the editorial might be appropriate. The argument in the first letter was certainly "nil" while in the second, by "Klondike," a trace might be discovered on close inspection. Thanking you once more for your valuable space and hoping for some correspondence more to the point and less facetious in the near future. I am, H. MOUQUIN.

scholar from McGill. He concluded by mentioning the noble part played by the latter in the great struggle in which so many of our graduates have figured.

Refreshments were then served to the satisfaction of all. This most interesting event was followed by a number of the old college songs, one of the most popular being, as usual, "Alouette" led by the Dean. The evening was brought to a close by the McGill yell and "God Save the King" both of which were given in true student fashion.

McGILL MAN WITH CROSS IN GERMANY

Capt. Hanington Went Overseas With First Division.

MEMBER OF SCI. '17.

Has Won M.C. With Bar—Will Winter in Coblenz, Germany.

The following letter received by his father, from Captain F. C. Hanington, tells of the part the Canadians played in the last victorious struggle.

Capt. Hanington was a member of the class of Science '17. Immediately upon the outbreak of war he enlisted, going overseas with the first Canadian division. He took part in the first engagement in France and has been carrying on over there ever since. For his gallant work at Vimy Ridge he was awarded the Military Cross. Unfortunately, he was wounded in this engagement but upon recovery, returned to his battery. Since that time he has never been off duty due to injury. He has personally taken command of the battery during many important actions in the absence of the commanding officer. Lately Hanington has secured a bar to his Military Cross for his personal services.

Capt. Hanington says: "We are to-day at Elouges, a mining town between Valenciennes and Mons. We will remain here for three or four days. The great march has just started. We fall along, our division for a while behind the others. Just before we enter Germany, we are to take the lead. It will be great. That march will be a grand thing. We will have our revenge—not in blood and iron, but I think we will show them that we can rise above that."

"Imagine those people over there waiting for us to land in on them! Their own army will march back through them, beaten and broken, for a week."

"Then, for a few days, no one will march."

"And one morning, in we will swing—our lot, horse, foot and guns. A victorious army! And surely that is revenge enough. All the vaunted glory of the German army has not proved of worth enough to keep us from the sacred Rhineland."

"Everywhere they are marching on, the French, the Belgians, the Yanks, and ourselves."

"And the ghosts of the old 'Contemptibles' march unseen beside us. "This evening, the old fellow we are billeted on—a fine-spirited old chap—pointed with pride to the pictures of his King and Queen hanging over his fireplace, all decked with flags. He brought us up, from where he had hidden them, the pay books and effects of three of the old army who fell here on his very farm in the dark days of August, 1914. Sad relics, but things what they will mean to their people. Those were three boys of the 1st Norfolk of the 5th Division. They fell almost at the first shot. We will send their things to their regiment, and I am going to write to their mothers. I found their addresses. Hope they get the news after all these years."

"You should see the stream of returning refugees pouring back. Every army wagon or lorry is full of them, and they march in thousands. They carry their kit, push it in wheelbarrows, wagons and carts and some of them have dogs, goats, cows, oxen, horses—almost all animals but sea lions and dinoceraes. One enormous wagon came along all decked out with flags and pulled by four men and four girls. Away up on top was a small, red-faced baby, fast asleep. Didn't give a damn about war, either, that baby. Rather terrible, though, and they call war glorious. Christ forbid any more wars."

"Have been meeting some more sisters. It is funny, but the finest girls I know are nurses. As a class, and as

R. V. C. NOTES

R.V.C. Undergrad. Met.

A meeting of the R.V.C. Undergraduate Society was held yesterday, at one o'clock, in the common room. The chief business was concerning Mrs. Vaughn's wedding present, and it was decided that this take the form of a gift to the University in Mrs. Vaughn's name. A committee was elected to take charge of the matter.

It was also decided that the R.V.C. Reading Room magazines be sent at the end of each month to the Drummond Street Library for Wounded Soldiers, as was done last year.

The president then reminded those present that it was time for the first pair of socks, or twenty-five cents, to be given in for the Red Cross. She also said that all those wishing to do so would be given an opportunity to visit the University Settlement, and anyone who would like to attend the lectures on Social Service given at the Y.M.C.A. Hall on Drummond Street, would be very welcome.

Every student was requested to pay stricter attention to the library regulations, and be very careful not to injure the books.

As there was no further business, the meeting then adjourned.

First Year.

There is a special notice for First Year undergraduates and partials on the Physical Education board. All students of the First Year please read this as soon as possible.

Gym. Classes.

The "B" Gym. Class and the "C" Class at 3 have been cancelled for today, Friday, 13th of December.

Found.

The porter still has a Gold Bangle, a Gold Ring, two Fountain Pens, a Comb, and a sum of money. Anyone missing any of these articles, please claim them as soon as possible.

An Invitation.

A letter has been received by Miss Hurlbutt from Miss Helen Savage, secretary of the Junior League, inviting all members of the Royal Victoria College interested in the lectures on Social Service to attend. The lectures are to be held in the Y.M.C.A. on Drummond Street, at 8.30 p.m., on the following evenings: Wednesday, December 18th, "What is Charity?" Wednesday, January 8th, "Essentials to Effective Social Service"; Wednesday, January 15th, "What You Should Do, and Can Do."

Individuals. I rather like them, you know. They are womanly women, and attractive, and understanding. And they treat you like pals. Last evening, we rode for two hours in the most wonderful moonlight along the Escant canal. The horses were fresh, and the girls were just nice Canadian girls, and that's 'nuff said. This morning we marched on the out trail, and will probably never see them again—ships that pass in the night. It is pretty hard to beat, a little while like that snatched from old Father Time. Those nurses all look you straight in the eye; they think straight, and they talk straight. But then, after all, the first woman I ever loved, 24 years ago, was a nurse! "Get a good map and follow our march to the Rhine. Never before was there one to beat it. And we were fighting like wildcats all summer, and didn't realize that we were absolutely choking the life out of the old Boche."

TRACK CLUB MEET MAY SOON BE HELD

Meeting Will be Held To-day to Decide Upon Matter.

Much interest was shown by the students by the announcement that in all probability there would be an indoor track meet in the near future. Many of the men have been wishing that some form of exercise could be found which would keep them in trim during the winter months, and nothing could do this in as good a manner as track work. Men who were prominent on the track in past years were elated by the announcement, and are only waiting for a definite statement until they get into training.

There were many men who did not turn out for the track meet last year, owing to conditions caused by the war, and these, too, it is expected, will contribute to the entries for the events. The Freshmen are requested to turn out and assist in making the meet a success. The men of the other years are known, but the Freshmen must necessarily play a large part in any undertaking of the student body, and should make it a point to give information regarding their activities along these lines as soon as possible.

It is possible that interfaculty contests will be held, and these along with the interyear contests usually held will undoubtedly prove to be one of the major attractions.

The executive of the Track Club will not undertake any such proposition unless they are absolutely sure that they have the support of the whole student body behind them. A meeting of the Track Club will be held at five o'clock this afternoon to discuss the question, and it is absolutely necessary that there should be a large representation of the student body present to voice their views. The meeting will be held in the Union. All Up!

SCIENCE SOPHS ENTERTAINED BY FRESHMEN

ber of the Royal Air Force, and therefore was a very suitable person to reply to this toast. Mr. Lafoley gave the latest statistics of the number of McGill men overseas, and 40 per cent. of these were Science men. He gave accurate figures of the great many honours won by Science grads and undergrads overseas, and dwelt at length on the fine work of the McGill hospital in France. In conclusion, Mr. Lafoley told about how he ran up against McGill men everywhere, and how they all looked back on the days spent at McGill as the most happy of their lives.

During intervals between toasts and speeches, music was rendered by the Cyclone Jazz Band under the able direction of George Cloutier. The music furnished was of the highest order. Cloutier, himself, delighted the audience with several selections on the Hawaiian guitar. Edwin Sherrad, Science '22, gave those present a very fine violin solo, and showed very remarkable ability on this instrument.

The toast to the Sophomores was responded to by Cuddy, president of that year. In thanking the hosts for their entertainment, he expressed the wish, on behalf of the Sophomores, that all future Freshmen years should keep up the practice of giving this dinner, as it gave the men of both years a great opportunity to meet each other. Cuddy was of the opinion that the suspension of the "rush" was a great shame, and that in future years he hoped that it would be resumed. The remarks on this subject brought forth loud cries from both years that it was good for the other that no rush took place.

Dr. Sullivan, in rising to respond to the toast to the "Ladies," was greeted with loud and prolonged applause, which demonstrated the popularity of Dr. Sullivan, and of the fair recipients of this toast. When at last order was restored, Dr. Sullivan showed that despite his "ignorance" of the subject as he termed it he was able to discourse at length on it, delighting the hearts of his hearers.

The behaviour of the hosts and the guests was on the whole well ordered, and nothing more serious than flying streamers and knotted napkins filled the air, and only at one point did "order" have to be called.

An unsuccessful attempt at a yell by the sophs, during the evening evoked loud hisses and boos from the Freshmen, but later the Second Year men made good in a second attempt.

Tittinson, the popular "switchboard operator," of Sci. '22, gave a short speech which greatly amused all present.

President Fisk in making a few closing remarks paid tribute to Paul Gnaedinger, who was largely responsible for the arrangements for the dinner. The evening was concluded with "Alma Mater," the McGill yell and "God Save the King."

ALUMNAE SOC. LECTURE WAS INTERESTING

An Excellent Novel, One True to Nature.

MARY CHOLMONDELY.

Mrs. Stevenson Defines Position
Held by Author Among Novelists.

Yesterday afternoon a most delightful lecture on "Mary Cholmondeley and Her Books" was given by Mrs. J. S. Stevenson, before the Alumnae Society. Mrs. Stevenson began by defining an excellent novel as "one which is true to nature—but not to nature with the soul left out." Miss Cholmondeley's novels are of this type. She believed in an ideal and lived up to it. Her work compares favourably with George Eliot's. Though the Shakespearean power is lacking, yet she has a feeling of nature, true and sympathetic, a spirit of beauty, and above all her characters ring true.

Her characters reveal the fact that we are not so admirable as we seem to ourselves. Fay and Lady Newhaven are excellent examples of the mental camouflage which conceals the rottenness within. That her characters are true to life is proved by the number of letters which Miss Cholmondeley received accusing her of caricaturing or portraying numbers of individuals, some of whom she had never met. Gresley the clergyman was one who was recognized by many people as being an excellent portrait of their own vicar.

One of Miss Cholmondeley's great virtues is that she takes pains with her work. As well as being a novelist, she is an excellent writer of short stories. Her work in later books and stories is rather more cramped, for she adheres more closely to her own experiences. The best of her novels are: "Prisoners," "Notwithstanding" and "Red Pottage."

Fay, the heroine of "Prisoners," is a decidedly unheroic character, leaving her lover in prison, though she has the power to set him free, and stifling her conscience by posing as a martyr and doing good in a conventional way. The two maiden aunts of "Notwithstanding" are truly works of art. They consider themselves the pattern of all virtues, and are a continual source of admiration to each other. Their niece Annette is brought under their influence, and they do their best to train her in the way she should go. Mrs. Stevenson read some very amusing passages from this novel, bringing out the characters of these two old ladies.

"Red Pottage" is perhaps the most finished and artistic. Rachel is good and womanly; Hester more intellectual than Rachel, but "steel true." Lady Newhaven forms a striking contrast to these two. Of the male characters, Gresley is the best and most realistic. He is a good man, painfully good, utterly lacking in humour, and dense with that density which makes him believe firmly in his own clear-sightedness.

"Diana Tempest" shows excellent character painting. There is much that is sombre, but you have the comfortable feeling that all ends well.

In Miss Cholmondeley's last book: "Under One Roof," she gives most exquisite sketches of her own family and home life. Her father was a clergyman, beloved by his children and people, jolly and kind. Her mother, though an invalid, was a stern upholder of duty, and was implicitly obeyed by her eight children, who had a great affection for her. Mary was the eldest of the family. The girls all had a great deal of literary ability. Hester, the youngest, showed most promise. She was a born critic, making notes and criticisms on all her readings. At an early age she read Carlyle's Essays on Heroes and Dante's Divine Comedy, leaving excellent observations on both. She also wrote poetry and many excellent essays. She was a lovely girl, and did not neglect the social side of life, though literature was her favourite occupation. Her death was most keenly felt.

Miss Cholmondeley touches upon her home life with great reserve of expression and exquisite delicacy. These

SETTLEMENT PROBLEM

BY DR. CALDWELL

(Continued from Wednesday, Dec. 4) to social suggestion, to temptation, to ignorance, feeble-mindedness, to the 'struggle for life,' and so on. Lombroso brought out his books on the criminal as a degenerate, or as a 'survival,' as a case of 'atavism.' Another school (Ferri) laid stress on the environment. Then the psychologists began to talk about 'social suggestion' and 'imitation,' and so on. The French began to impress the world with their wonderful system for the detection of crime and for the method of their police in marking and registering criminals (the Bertillon system), so that their doings could be followed throughout life. And both French and Germans brought out books on special divisions of criminology—the physiology, the psychology, the biology, the diseases, of the criminal, etc. The Americans and the English—

Their Work.
The Americans and the English with their more practical and experimental tendencies studied chiefly how to reduce crime, or how to improve the machinery of justice, how to effect reforms while England, as I indicated, seemed to be working at the top of the problem, Americans characteristically began at the bottom with the 'juvenile offender.' Judge Lindsay, of Colorado, made himself famous, and became one of the great benefactors of the world by his institution of the Juvenile Court in Denver. Here he began talking 'just like a father' to an offending boy or girl in a special court room with no policeman present—only the probation officer, the parents, or any others (the teacher, the employer) who might be brought by the probation officer. The probation officer is the 'friendly visitor' of the new system; the person who acts the part of the good neighbour to the young offender and his family, investigating the 'case' in the proper way and arrange for its proper presentation before the special juvenile court.

The Wonderful Elmira System.

One of the next great steps in advance was the wonderful record and procedure of the Elmira Reformatory, the famous New York State experimental prison for male 'first offenders.' This impressed the world in different ways, of course. It aroused the approval and interest of many, but from others (hardened prison officials of the old school) drew forth incredulity and contempt—it was too soft a method, they maintained. The Elmira system seemed, however, to be at least successful in keeping first offenders from becoming habitual offenders—'repeaters,' as the police say. It seemed able to place men after correction and training into shops and on farms, and in homes (sometimes their own home), making them write regularly to the reformatory until they no longer needed supervision. The Elmira method (it soon took a hold elsewhere in the States) is simply a method of taking up a delinquent exactly where he is when convicted of an offence, of taking up his moral, and physical, and civic (?) and occupational training where it left off, or where it never began. It puts him in grade 'B' as he enters the prison. (To be Continued) sketches lead one to know and appreciate her and her work as nothing else could. Throughout all her work is seen her kindly humour and her friendly, sympathetic outlook on life.

ILLUSTRATED TALK GIVEN BEFORE R.V.C.

Civil Re-Establishment of Soldiers Was Topic.

MAJOR MACKEE SPOKE.

Reviews Wonderful Work Carried on by This Department.

Last night in the Assembly Hall of the Royal Victoria College many people had the pleasure of seeing some very wonderful views of the work of the Department of Soldiers' Civil Re-Establishment. Mr. E. W. Beatty, president of the Canadian Pacific Railway Company, who was to have made the introductory address, was unable to be present as he had been called to a railroad executive meeting in New York. Mr. MacTear conveyed Mr. Beatty's regrets, and spoke of the work he had been able to witness in the Canadian Pacific Railway Company. The Civil Re-Establishment he compared to Social Service. He then introduced Major MacKee.

These pictures, said Major MacKee, were intended to show the people what the Canadian Government was really doing. They had been shown last year to more than 1,000 returned soldiers in England about to return to civil life in Canada. In Quebec alone, there were now over 350 discharged men learning new trades while 1,000 additional men were still convalescing. Even 300 ladies had been graduated to do war occupations. The work of the disabled returned soldiers is of two kinds: First, ward occupations for those unable to leave their beds, and then convalescent occupations of all kinds.

The pictures began with a description of the disembarkation of the returned soldiers at Halifax. In the discharge depots some soldiers were seen receiving advance in their pay, or outfits of civilian clothes. The hospital trains were then seen leaving the stations to bear the heroes home amid handshakes and cheering.

Views of the various hospitals in Eastern Canada; at Cobourg, Kingston, Montreal, Kentville and Halifax were next shown. Some of the ward cases were shown at work on all kinds of handicraft—basketry, embroidery, etc. Then the patients were seen during the rest hour.

The next series showed soldiers arriving in Toronto where they were received in motor cars and either taken home for two weeks' leave before continuing hospital treatment, or in the more serious cases, taken directly to the hospitals. The hospitals at Toronto, Hamilton, London and Whitby were seen, where the soldiers appeared to be enjoying themselves in various kinds of recreation.

Going farther West, the audience was then introduced to the Military Convalescent Hospital in Winnipeg. Therapeutic equipment and vocational training as developed in Manitoba was shown. Most of the soldiers appeared to prefer some kinds of mechanical training. Others were seen preparing for Civil Service examinations. The Military Hospital at Deer Lodge and the Ninette Sanatorium were also seen.

The Military Hospitals of Alberta and Saskatchewan in Regina, Moose Jaw, Saskatoon, Calgary and Edmonton next appeared. Here the vocational training dealt largely with agricultural problems. The agricultural colleges in both Saskatoon and Edmonton are devoting much of their time to the training of the returned soldier. Some of the men were seen studying the construction and operation of all kinds of farm machinery.

The beautiful scenery of British Columbia lent its exquisite background for the hospitals at Balfour, Kamloops, Vancouver, Victoria, Sidney and Qualicum. The returned soldiers were seen leaving the train in Vancouver and proceeding by boat to Esquimalt. The new military annex of the Vancouver General Hospital was also shown.

The problem of re-education for the disabled was next handled. Ontario led the way to agricultural training by opening up the vast fields of New Ontario to the disabled. A number of these with their wives and families were seen about to leave for Kapuskasing. The Dominion has adopted a similar method for other fields. Other soldiers were seen learning stationary engineering, electrical work of all kinds, the making of tools, and woodwork. This last is especially popular with the returned men as it enables them to construct useful articles for their homes. Some samples of cabinets and tables displayed their skill in this line of work. Some of the returned men were seen with pick at work in the coalfields of Alberta and British Columbia. Others were learning the process of mine rescue work. A series of excellent views showed returned men at work in printing offices, and doing photo-engraving work. A one-armed telegrapher was seen at work, and Capt. Baker, one of the fifty blind cases with whom Canada has had to deal, was seen working a typewriter in his office. Capt. Baker had graduated in Civil Engineering before going overseas, and was able to enter an office in a similar line of work, having been taught to read and write by the Braille system. He typed a message of cheer for his comrades. The work as developed in McGill was next shown.

The marvellous advance made in the construction of artificial limbs was vividly displayed. The limbs are made from the osier tree and from a particular kind of willow tree. These trees grow from Ottawa to Florida and are planted especially for the purpose. The construction of these limbs, after accurate measurement and by means of a perfect model was then shown. The limbs are hollowed out by a special instrument until only a quarter of an inch thick and then covered with raw-hide to add to their strength. The patients were seen learning to walk, ride bicycles and climb ladders, and the strength of the grip of the artificial hand was demonstrated. Finally the making and fitting of orthopedic shoes and other appliances were shown.

After the film, Mr. MacTear again spoke a few words and introduced Mr. Porter, of the Faculty of Applied Science. Mr. Porter spoke of McGill's share in the war and the amount of good work he himself had been able to see. He thanked Major MacKee for his kindness in presenting the pictures. The audience then joined in the singing of God Save the King.

trust in power or wealth for its own sake, we may maintain our end; but at the cost of all that is best in our national traditions and character. If we base our conception of national welfare on the fulfillment of the mutual obligations of the citizens, upon the sanctity and dignity of the individual life, and upon the nobility of service, we shall not go far wrong, whatever development our institutions may take."

It is this very ethical note which Fayle brings out here, that is running through the whole of this great policy of the British Labour Party.

Recognizing the huge task which faces the people of Great Britain, the British Labour Party is the only one who has sought to resolutely and firmly meet the demand. Not in any hurried moment, but calmly they looked ahead and provisioned for the time. During the war and even a little before, old traditions were tottering and even falling; so that any suggestion of the removal of old time traditions in this policy is no argument against it, but rather is in its favour. We have been learning during the war what co-operation means for common ends. We will need to foster this in the politics of the future.

Again, in Henderson's book, "The Aims of Labour," he says: "In a wider sense than has hitherto been understood the politics of the future will be human politics, and the dominating party will be the party of the common people and of Democracy. This is certain. The people will have it so, for the people are weary of wars. They have borne too long the inequalities and injustices inherent in an economic system based on competion instead of co-operation. They are coming together in a more powerfully organized movement to achieve a new freedom, and to establish on this earth, drenched with men's blood, torn with men's struggles, wet with human tears, a fairer ideal of life."

Grier's article, which follows, aroused much interest in the minds of his hearers:—

One of the most dramatic figures that has ever taken the stage of British politics is David Lloyd George. From a home humble and a position obscure he has raised himself into a position second only to the King. Consequently all eyes are on him all the time. No whisper from him is missed.

It will be our purpose to-night to trace in rapid outline the political career of Lloyd George. We may most conveniently do so by dividing his career thus far into four main divisions: (1) The formative and preparatory, 1894; (2) The period of opposition and combativeness, 1894-1906; (3) The period of responsibility and administration, 1906-1914; (4) L. G. and the war. These divisions are quite arbitrary but they will serve our purpose.
